The fact that the movement is to become nation-wide, and that the assolcation will delve into every phase of the government ownership plan is of deepest interest to everyone. Col. Brookbart today explained his organization plans in the following article exclusively written for the United Press:

The purpose of this organization is will first learn the facts and then American people are entitled to know the truth about both sides of the great questions of public ownership of public utilitities. Its scope will not be limited to the railroads, but it will include all public utilities. In fact, the first and only active steps its members have already taken are for the investigation of government ownership of telegraph and telephones. Municipal utilities will receive immediate attention, and the will be divided and classified, and asvestigation and report.

They indicate the harmony and unity of purpose among all sections necessary for successful results.

> The unthinking might laugh at the enthusiasm shown -but the wise realize that enthusiasm is the most valuable asset a man or a community can have—that nothing really worth while has ever been accomplished without it. Enthusiasm is the first essential. It is the ebulition of optimism-and no city was ever built and no country ever developed by pessimism.

> Given the natural resources, it is the duty of the community to utilize its enthusiasm in their developmentotherwise it will be wasted and the pictures conjured by our orators remain dreams for a more energetic future to realize.

> Cities do not grow or countries develop except by design, persistency and energy. The village forever vegetates as a village, the forest a tangled woodland, unless transformed by the brain and hand of man. It is not the environment that makes the city so much as the character of its citizenship.
